

What's on this website

Welcome to the INVOLVE Learning and Development page. Here you will find tools, resources and systems to support public involvement in research – including members of the public, researchers, public involvement managers and research organisations.

Everyone engaged in public involvement needs support to develop their knowledge, skills and experience. This may be learning a new skill, or updating skills you already have. Many of the tools and resources can be found in the 'Let's Get Started' section.

A good place to start may be the Top Tips section, where the Top Tips for Learning and Development offer some advice, and point to many of the tools and resources on this page.

And if you prefer, take a look at the short video which shows you where to find things on this page.

Coming in 2018 is an on-line system that will help you to:

- find a training course, or learning and development resource
- recommend a training course, or learning and development resource
- identify what you need to learn or develop for your role.
